

Dear Professor Karakelle:

My wife has suffered a major medical event requiring intensive home care, some of which I have to do on a continuing basis. Because I have to remain homebound during this difficult time, I can no longer make the trip to Turkey. This sad turn of events is especially difficult because of the interesting program you had planned for my visit, the time and effort devoted on behalf of my candidacy for the honorary degree, and the opportunity to address the National Education Congress. This is the trip I was very much looking forward to making.

With deep regret,

Albert Bandura
